Need to satisfy your graduate or undergraduate language requirement?

LATAM 110: ELEMENTARY MIXTEC I

Meets Mondays and Wednesday 12:00-1:50pm with PROFESSOR ANGELINA TRUJILLO

Learn Mixtec, an indigenous language spoken in southwestern Mexico. Our classes are taught by native speakers from Oaxaca who are committed to the survival and preservation of indigenous language and culture. SDSU’s Center for Latin American Studies is proud to offer students across campus the unique opportunity to learn about the languages and cultures of Mexico and Oaxacan migrants here in San Diego!

Course material will include pronunciation, oral practice, reading, listening comprehension and essentials of grammar in a communicative context and through task-based activities.

Check with your academic adviser to see how you can fulfill your undergraduate or graduate language requirement with Mixtec!

For more information on our language courses, please visit our website. For further questions, contact Lia Wesson, Administrative Coordinator at lwesson@sdsu.edu.

LATAM 296: ELEMENTARY NAHUATL I

Meets Tuesdays and Thursdays 9:00-10:50 AM with PROFESSOR EDUARDO de la CRUZ

Nahuatl is a major indigenous language spoken in Mexico today by more than a million people, the language spoken by the Aztecs and other Nahuatlaca of Mesoamerica.

In the fall semester, the Center for LAS will offer 4 units in Modern Huastecan Nahuatl as LATAM-296. The course is taught live by a native-speaking instructor in Modern Huastecan Nahuatl. Course material will include linguistic and cultural content related to Nahua daily life.

Spanish requirement for the Nahuatl course.

For more information on our language courses, please visit our website. For further questions, contact Lia Wesson, Administrative Coordinator at lwesson@sdsu.edu.
Internship Opportunities

FALL 2018 LAS INTERNSHIP COURSE

The Center for LAS has contacts with several local organizations in San Diego who are looking for interns. Students will earn 3 units of credit when enrolled in LATAM 495/795 and be placed at one of the following internship sites. Check out the internship opportunities available this Fall:

1. Familia Indigena Unida - Participate in one of several programs including: Plaza Comunitaria & GED Mentoring, Youth Mentoring, Micro-Enterprise or Community Garden.
2. EJE Academies - Provide tutoring and activities to middle school youth that will enrich the lives of these students, while preparing them for college.
3. Unaccompanied Minors Shelter - Teach life skills and provide education and recreational activities to refugee minors, while they await reunification with their families in the US or abroad. Learn firsthand about the experiences of youths who have immigrated to the US.
4. Mid-City CAN - Teach principles of Restorative Justice to high school youth or work alongside community advocates for Food Justice in the school system.
5. United Way - Provide case management support for chronically absent students in elementary schools and their families.
6. The Cultural Media Archive - Collect narratives to document how first generation youth, youth of color, and queer youth, construct and engage in notions of citizenship. Learn social science methodologies.
7. Pro Salud - Provide health education to some of the most vulnerable populations within the region of Tijuana.

For more information, please visit our website. For further questions, contact Juliana Huaroc, Internship Programs Coordinator at clasintr@sdsu.edu.

OTAY ALLIES GRASSROOTS ORGANIZATION

Otay Allies is a grassroots organization that seeks to uphold standards of human decency and government accountability by communicating directly with detained refugees at Otay Mesa Detention Center. The Otay Mesa detention center is a privately-contracted detention facility run by CoreCivic. It currently houses asylum-seeking refugees from Central America, as well as other detainees of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency and the U.S. Marshal Service, totaling approximately 1,000 inmates.

Interns will help intake detainee letters, document refugee stories and do media outreach to help amplify the plight of migrants and asylum seekers in detention. Interns will work with SDSU librarians and archivists to digitize, transcribe and identify keywords to help make the collections more usable to the public. This is a hugely important project that allows us to witness and document the current treatment of migrants seeking aid at our borders.

For more information, please visit Otay Allies' website. If you are interested in this internship opportunity, please contact Professor Swanson at kswanson@sdsu.edu.

MADRES Y FAMILIAS DEPORTADAS EN ACCION GRASSROOTS ORGANIZATION

Madres and Familias Deportadas Center grew out of relationships with people in the USA who wanted to help families separated by deportation. The organization sought to encourage a more balanced narrative about Mexico’s new wave of deportees to replace the media’s narrow focus on narco-trafficking and violence. Most deportees are completely lost once US immigration officers remove them to Tijuana being that it is not where many of them originate. At the Center, we help migrants, especially women with children during a tough transitional period.

Traveling to the city of Tijuana, students will have unprecedented opportunities to exchange dialogue with people who have experienced deportation. Participants will also meet deported mothers, deported US veterans, artists, refugees, social activists, environmentalists, and attorneys that are all involved with our organization. Students will have an experience they will never forget.

For more information, visit our Facebook page. Please contact Juliana Huaroc, Internship Programs Coordinator at clasintr@sdsu.edu to learn how to get involved.

LAS UNDERGRADUATE ELECTIVE COURSES

POLS 564: Political Ecology of Latin America

Meets Mondays and Wednesdays 4:00-5:15 pm with Professor DAVID CARRUTHERS.

Are you interested in the political ecology of Latin American and the Caribbean? Sign up for POLS 564 with Dr. Carruthers. This course is concerned with the political economy of environmental crisis, and the popular, political response of citizens. Students will analyze the historical context, the political institutions, and the national policies, priorities, and processes that shape environmental and social outcomes in select cases drawn from throughout the region. POLS 564 will pay special attention to political and economic power and the ecological and human consequences of its expression. While exploring the hopes and frustrations of the many creative programs and initiatives by which millions of Latin Americans are striving to create a more just sustainable future.
POLS 564 satisfies requirements for all LATAM undergraduate majors and minors, as well as graduate students in the MA and concurrent degree programs.

ANTH 582: BRAZIL: CULTURE & POLITICS

Meets Mondays and Wednesdays 2:00-3:15 PM with Professor ERIKA ROBB LARKINS.

This course introduces students to contemporary Brazilian society and culture with a focus on social and economic equality. Grounding our study in a broad overview of Brazil’s colonial history and emergence as a modern nation, we will explore the country’s incredible diversity, as well as discuss some of the challenges it currently faces. Course material will include exploration of processes of colonialization and slavery, racial, and ethnic identity, rural and urban life, politics, poverty, crime, gender, religion, healthcare and popular culture.

In the exploration of Brazil, you will engage with different types of sources and materials: primary historical documents, films, music, fiction, and ethnography.

For more info., contact the Brazil Program at www.brazil.sdsu.edu or email Dr. Erika Robb Larkins at erika.larkins@sdsu.edu.

LATAM 307: BRAZILIAN MUSIC & CULTURE

Meets Mondays 4:00-6:40pm with Professor RICARDO VASCONCELOS and is taught in English.

LATAM 307 focuses on 20th and 21st centuries' Brazilian music and culture, highlighting diverse periods and music genres, both classic and contemporary. Discussions center both on the esthetic languages of the genres and on the cultural insights they provide, establishing meaningful links to historical and social aspects such as race, political turmoil and change, authoritarianism and resistance. Among other topics, the course will discuss the role, in the Brazilian music scene and society, of the genres and movements, Samba, Bossa NOva, MPB (Música Popular Brasileira), Pop-Rock, and Punk; as well as other genres such Hip-hop and Funk, Technobrega and Forró!

LATAM 307 fulfills GER Explorations of Human Experience-C [Humanities]

For more information on LATAM 307, please contact Professor Ricardo Vasconcelos: rvasconcelos@sdsu.edu

LATAM 420: LATIN AMERICA THROUGH FILM

Meets Mondays 4:00-6:40 pm with Professor ROBERT GUZMAN.

See Latin America through the lens of directors from across the globe! Explore the history and the development of cultures that were made after Columbus’s voyage to the New World. Witness how Indigenous societies, European transplants, and forced African migration to the Americas created the rich and varied cultural tapestry found in Latin America today—500 years after Columbus first set foot in the New World. Based on primary, secondary sources, power point presentations, and, more importantly, cinema film, this course will analyze the creation of the modern Latin American nations we interact with today.

LATAM 420 fulfills GER Explorations of Human Experience-C [Humanities]
